Special Weekend at Colonial Michilimackinac, August 5-6, to Explore the Free and Enslaved People Who Worked For John Askin

MACKINAC CITY, MICH. — It took a lot of people to keep the community of Michilimackinac working. Join the interpretive staff at Colonial Michilimackinac August 5-6 as they explore the lives of the men and women, both free and enslaved, who worked for the merchant John Askin at Michilimackinac in the 1770s.

“We’ll be doing things that are truly special that guests wouldn’t be able to see otherwise,” said Craig Wilson, Mackinac State Historic Parks Chief Curator. “Even if someone has visited in the past, there is always something new to see or do.”

Staff and more than 20 volunteers will demonstrate the various work performed by Askin’s employees, who included sailors, bakers, gardeners, cooks, voyageurs, laundresses, and more. Informal demonstrations will be taking place in and around the fort throughout the event.
